

doobba, Denver’s first social equity cannabis delivery company, officially partners with Mighty Trees Dispensary

DENVER (September 30, 2021) – doobba, Colorado’s premier delivery company and Denver’s 1st, cannabis delivery company has been delivering flower, edibles, and topicals to its customers’ homes since August 23, 2021, when the company officially launched its operations.

doobba’s purpose is to end cannabis prohibition in addition to making cannabis products more accessible to adults over the age of 21, who want to experience cannabis in the safety of their homes.

“We are thrilled to announce a new dispensary partnership with Mighty Trees” said Karina Cohen. “Mighty Trees are known for their great product selections and outstanding customer service”.

Denverite Nick Barbagallo received the first delivery from doobba, which can deliver only to residential addresses in Denver and Aurora. Those placing the order, like Barbagallo, will have to show identification to the delivery driver. “I love delivery service because it’s great for people who don’t have time to get to a dispensary, don’t want to be seen at a dispensary, or have difficulty choosing when at a dispensary,” said Barbagallo. “Enjoying cannabis in the comfort of your home also reduces safety concerns.”

Per Colorado law, cannabis delivery companies must partner with a dispensary to be able to deliver cannabis. doobba is adding their second dispensary partner Mighty Trees, which was founded in Colorado five years ago.

The Denver City Council approved a measure in April limits new business licenses for social equity applicants exclusively through 2027. This prioritization system is meant to address harms to those impacted by arrests or convictions for drug offenses or who experienced civil asset forfeiture due to a drug-related investigation. doobba was the first applicant, first licensed and the first to make retail deliveries in Denver’s history.
